Seat belts worked

A small cut was the only injury in an accident Thursday noon at Woburn and Concord streets in Wilmington. Anne Gargano of King Street had taken the time to fasten the seat belts on her daughters Laura and Jennifer, and on herself. Mrs. Gargano was on the way to a doctor's appointment when another car collided with hers, causing it to take down a signal pole on the traffic island, in the foreground of the picture below. Operator of the other car was Khamphouang Douangmany of 70 A Shawsheen Ave., Wilmington.

The Wilmington Kiwanis Club has voted to present an award to Mrs. Gargano, to begin a campaign promoting the use of seat belts and proper child restraints in cars.

Propose changes in school's rules

"What good is a new building if the interior mechanisms are so lax that they don't compliment each other?" said Paul Fleming, the new principal of Wilmington High School.

Mr. Fleming, who took over the reins of the school last month, has proposed some changes in the rules and regulations of the school. His proposals will be discussed with the school committee next week. Areas covered by his proposals include attendance, smoking, requisite course loads, and grade level for athletic or student leadership participation.

Attendance figures for the past year, he said, indicate that of the 1100 students in the school, 44.91 percent had 15 or more absences during the year. "The percentage figures are outrageous. This should be only 11 or 12 percent," he said. "Excessive absences indicate a lack of respect for the educational process."

He has proposed changes in the attendance - keeping process, including the use of a daily bulletin and a parental note system. Accumulation of 12 unexcused absences — either class cutting or truancy — could cost a student course credit for the year. His proposal would also define excused and unexcused absences.

Mr. Fleming has received a letter from Robert Spencer, juvenile officer of the Wilmington Police Department, asking cooperation in identifying habitual truants early in the school year. Fleming intends to incorporate this into his practices.

He also is recommending that seniors be required to pass four out of five subjects in order to graduate. Coasting in the senior year slows down the thought processes, he said, referring to students who accumulate enough credits in three years to graduate.

He also has proposed to increase the requisite subjects, the course load, throughout the four years of high school. A vast majority of students presently exceed the requirements, he said, and this would formalize their efforts.

Another proposal would be to require an overall average of 70 in the preceding term in order for a student to participate in athletics. The present regulation, he said, is for a student to be above passing in 15 hours of classes, which cold allow a student with two failures and three 65's to still be playing. He is also proposing the same grade requirement for participation in student council or student advisory school committee.

Fleming said that although Wilmington High has an excellent athletic program, it is lacking in non-athletic student activities. One of his proposals is to introduce a school newspaper, produced largely by the students, which would go a long way in building school pride. He would also encourage the formation of student chapters of such organizations as Students Against Drunk Drivers, American Field Service, or the Model Congress Club.

Student smoking on school property would be banned, under another of Mr. Fleming's recommendations to the school committee. He said that allowing a smoking area was a contradiction of the school committee's model drug policy, of the school's health awareness courses, and of the fact that smoking causes cancer. He said that he was not an anto-smoking crusader, but that he did not feel that smoking had a place in the school. He said that he would make no recommendation on teachers smoking in the school building, leaving that question entirely up to the school committee.

Mr. Fleming denied a rumor that he would attempt to institute a dress code. He said that any such attempt would be unconstitutional, unless it addressed a particular issue of health or safety.

Lunch periods, which presently last 47 minutes, would be shortened to 25 minutes under Mr. Fleming's proposal. To do this, he would change the three academic periods in the middle of the day to 50 minutes each, allowing six lunch periods of 25 minutes each. He said he would try to keep age groups together in their lunch periods.

The extra time resulting from the shortened lunch period could then be used in study halls, activities, or special studies. He gave an example of a student being in an advanced algebra class, needing some extra work in the subject. With the teacher's approval, the student might be allowed to sit in and audit a class in the subject, giving time for some extra work and better explanation. Or perhaps a student might want to pursue an area of individual study, such as a musical instrument.

In drawing up his proposed regulations, Mr. Fleming reviewed a list of regulations prepared last year by a teachers' committee, many of which are used in his proposals. He said that most of them are standard in good secondary schools, and that they do not exist here.

Mr. Fleming comes to Wilmington from Plymouth, where he was assistant principal of Plymouth - Carver Regional High School. He has a collection of student handbooks from many Massachusetts secondary schools, and has written and edited such handbooks for about 15 years, he said.

Mr. Fleming said that he had sent out letters to about 50 students, inviting their input at a meeting on July 25. About 25 students showed up, and Mr. Fleming said he thought he had received good comments.

He said that assistant principals Jack Lynch and Ed Woods had been very helpful, as had Supt. Dr. Carol Sager and Asst. Supt. Bob Horan, as well as Matt Joyce, president of the Wilmington Teachers Association.

Mr. Fleming called rules and regulations a foundation on which the entire school's program is built. "The human spirit benefits best from an ordered process," he said.

He expressed great confidence in the school's potential, calling the faculty "absolutely mind-blowing in quality and credentials."

"I want to excite pride in this place," he said.

With major physical disruptions occuring at the school with the oil tank replacement and two years of renovation, he said that a strong foundation for the school's programs was absolutely necessary.

Planning for drop-in center moves forward

Although the Buzzell School is still being used for storage, a great deal of organizational work has been taking place in preparation for renovating the building into a new senior citizens' drop-in center.

The school was turned over to the Council on Aging (COA) at the Annual Town Meeting in April, but there was no appropriation for renovating the building. Therefore, the council is exploring ways to do the job with donated labor and materials.

"We have accomplished all that we set out to do," Chairman Margaret McNeill told the Council on Aging Monday afternoon. The recently elected chairman's report showed progress, both in soliciting support and in establishing the account needed to handle funds.

Mrs. McNeill, past chairman Jo Kelley and Joe Rexford make up the COA's renovation committee.

She reported that Shawsheen Tech has approved the renovation project for work by students in the coming school year. Because the teachers are on vacation, though, no cost estimates are yet available.

The town accountant, she said, has approved a revolving account for money for the renovation. With such an account, the council can accept and deposit donations for a specified purpose, such as paint or lumber, to be used on a one-time project.

Approval for solicitation has been received from the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, which provides a screening and approval service for solicitations going before its member firms.

Edith Cunningham, coordinator of the drop-in center, reported that the Minuteman Home Care Corp had turned down their request for funding for lumber. With no Wilmington repesentation on the board, such approval is difficult.

Mrs. McNeill volunteered to serve as the town's director with Minuteman, with Elaine Hatchey serving as the alternate.

Concert postponed to next Tuesday

Tewksbury wells improve, chemical levels at zero

According to a July 31 report from the Tewksbury Department of Public Works, the level of benzene and phenol in wells six and seven have dropped to zero.

Those wells, which account for 10 percent of the town's water supply, showed levels of the two agents last April and had been cause for some concern. According to the results of tests, the water coming out of one of the two wells located off Court Street had a level of bezene that could prove unhealthful if ingested over long periods of time. The other well showed a level of phenol which health officials indicated did not pose a major short-term health concern.

Those tests showed that there was 9.5 parts of bezene per billion parts water in one well while there was .05 parts of phenol per million parts water in the other.

The Federal Environmental Protection Agency has recommended a detectable limit of zero for benzene, a cancer causing agent added to gasoline and other compounds. However, since tests to determine at what level benzene starts to become a health hazard have yet to be compiled, that federal limit is not yet enforceable.

The State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, however, is requiring on interim basis that wells showing a limit of 10 parts benzene per billion parts water be shutdown.

The town is continuing to monitor the quality of water coming out of those wells.

Julie Marcil, R.D. is the staff nutritionist at Northmeadow. In addition, she does nutritional counseling and conducts permanent weight loss classes.

The lecture is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Karen Carney at Northmeadow, 851-3901.

Daley named vice president

Shirley A. Daley, of 415 Andover Street, Wilmington, has been appointed vice president of patient services at Whittier Rehabilitation Hospital, a 122-bed specialty hospital in Haverhill.

As vice president of patient services, Daly is responsible for the overall admission, continuation of stay, and discharge of patients. "Ms. Daley has 15 years of hospital experience, first as a nurse and later as an administrator," said Dr. Alfred L. Arcidi, Whittier's president, in announcing the appointment. "Her experience as a strong patient representative will help Whittier enhance patient services."

Before going to Whittier, Daly worked at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital, Boston for 12 years. She began as continuing care coordinator responsible for making plans for patients upon their discharge from Spaulding, then known as Massachusetts Rehabilitation Hospital. She later moved into administration, where she was in charge of staff education regarding levels of patient care and governmental and insurance regulations.

Daly also has worked as senior staff nurse at Massachusetts General Hospital and as assistant head nurse at Vassar Hospital, Poughkeepsie, New York.

Daly is a graduate of Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, Albany, New York.

Whittier Rehabilitation Hospital is a full service rehabilitation hospital providing inpatient care to adults in physical, occupational and recreational therapy and in speech and language pathology.

Work begins on septic system

Excavation is underway for the new septic system at the Shawsheen School in Wilmington. Health concerns had parents up in arms earlier this year, when the old septic system failed. After assuring parents that the school would not reopen in the fall unless the septic system was replaced, the town hired the D. J. Faulkner Co. of Bedford to rebuild the system, at a cost of $89,000.

Neighbor Network gives teens a substitute family

Local teenagers in a family crisis situation are being helped by a unique foster care program called Neighbor Network. In existence for only two years, Neighbor Network serves as an "emergency shelter and a safe, supportive environment" for adolescents age 11 to 18 in the Wilmington - Woburn area, according to homefinder Pat McCormack.

The program is offered under the auspices of the Woburn Council of Social Concern and funded by the Department of Social Services. It serves to separate teenagers from families who are physically or emotionally abusive. The foster family then becomes the substitute family, providing the child with certain limits, love, and support to allow for a cooling down period.

The Department of Social Services refers the adolescent to the Network which in turn finds a volunteer family to care for the child for a period of one to 45 days. During this time, the teen attends hourly sessions each week with Network Coordinator Howard Goldberg and participates in weekly recreational activities.

"I feel both the kids and families get something out of it; it's very rewarding," says Ms. McCormack, whose main job is to locate volunteer foster families and drivers. "Of course, it can be frustrating because of the short period of time involved." but looking ahead, she hopes to start a long term foster program.

Right now there is an urgent need for local families to get involved on a volunteer basis. Families receive $10 a day while the teenager is placed with them. They are also provided with mandatory monthly training and 24 hour support. "They are not alone in any situation," stressed Ms. McCormack.

Neighbor Network is also available for speaking engagements through church, PTA, or other organizations. Anyone wishing to volunteer or desiring a speaker should contact Ms. McCormack at 935-6495 in Woburn.

Joy Cobleigh weds Ronald Wallace

Joy Ellen Cobleigh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cobleigh of Cobleigh Drive, Tewksbury, became the bride of Ronald Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wallace of Sunset Road on Saturday, June 2 at the First Baptist Church in Tewksbury.

The Rev. Rice of the First Baptist Church and Father Smith of St. Dorothy's performed the ecumenical service.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a gown of white silk organza designed with a Queen Ann neckline, featuring a fitted bodice and waistline and long bishop sleeves. Her flounced hemline extended into a cathedral length train accented by chantilly and venice lace. Completing the bridal outfit was a wreath of silk flowers and veiling.

Kim Bowen of Lowell, sister of the bride served as matron of honor while the bridesmaids included Debbie Scott, Kathy O'Brien, Maura Saunders, and Jodi Lyn Sutherland, cousin of the bride all of Tewksbury and Kathi Welch of Methuen.

Lori Jane Sutherland of Tewksbury, cousin of the bride and Tanya Lee Teeboom of Nashua, also a cousin of the bride acted as junior bridesmaids.

The bride's attendants wore Romance and light blue taffeta gowns designed with a scoop neckline, french pouf sleeves, fitted waistlines and flounced hems. They carried old fashioned bouquets of silk roses, daisies and carnations.

Robert Wallace of Tewksbury served his brother as best man while ushering duties were in charge of Richard Wallace, brother of the groom, of Greenville, N.H.; Gerald Paglia of Tewksbury and Thomas Sullivan of Pepperell, brothers-in-law of the groom; Michael Barlow of Tewksbury and Ted Pinkos of Holyoke, close friends of the groom.

Kathleen Rice of Tewksbury enhanced the ceremony as soloist.

Miceli announces Local Aid bonuses

Representative James R. Miceli (D), Tewksbury and Wilmington, announced recently an overwhelming increase in his district's Local Aid figures.

Both towns already received a record amount of Local Aid this year. This new amount is a bonus generated by Representative Miceli and other active members of the Massachusetts House and Senate who fought to make sure that the communities shared in the tremendous financial growth that the Commonwealth has experienced this year.

The Town of Tewksbury received in addition to the record amount of $7,017,931, a bonus of $169,380 to make a total of $7,187,311 in Local Aid.

The Town of Wilmington also, in addition to the record amount of $4,268,868, received a bonus of $80,155 which includes $24,344 in savings relative to the MDS assessments and Chapter 70 adjustments that have been forgiven to make a total of $4,324,679 in Local Aid.

Through the combined efforts of Representative Miceli and the Massachusetts Legislature, the state Local Aid figures this year were increased by an additional $300 dollars over last year's figure of $2.286 billion thus allowing for an overall increase in Local Aid.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Whoever said there is no Immortality? As long as the "kids" Larry Cushing touched in his lifetime (and they are legion) continue to put into practice the wonderful lessons of ethics, humanity, and service to others, Larry will live forever.

My first contact with Larry was when I moved to Wilmington and attended the Buzzell, and our relationship grew beautifully over the years. It seemed whenever I met Larry afterward at a social function or the Rotary cookout he always praised my play at football. I used to joke with Jack and Charlie Cushing that if Larry extolled my ability anymore, I'd find myself in the Pro's. That was one of Larry's attributes though, he always praised, never had a negative word about anyone.

I do know this, Larry was an exemplary person and if I can continue to use him as a model and apply all the lessons he taught me and live my life in the manner he did, when it's my turn to go, since Larry was a fine recruiter, maybe he'll put in a good word with St. Peter and I'll find myself starting as a Left Guard in the Pro's.

In loving memory and deep appreciation to a wonderful man.

Ken Spinelli

Dear Larz:

The Human Rights Committee of Mystic Valley Mental Health Center Association would like to expand its membership and invites volunteers to participate in the Committee as citizen and consumer advocates.

This Committee functions as a very important part of mental health associations. By way of explanation, The Human Rights Committee monitors mental health and mental retardation services and procedures in accordance with DMH regulations, in order to protect the human, civil, and legal rights of clients. Its major focus has been to monitor, through regular site visits, MVMHCA's mental retardation programs, including the Kelliher Workshops and Community Residences, to insure that certain state licensing requirements are met. In addition, the HRC reviews and approves all research projects that involve direct contact with Center clients, has developed Informed Consent Forms and procedures for the use of videotaping and audiotaping of clients, has provided guidelines for access to client records and the maintenance of confidentiality of records, has acted as a mediator for client grievances, and is continuing to look at ways to enhance the quality of life of clients in our programs.

The Human Rights Committee meets approximately ten (10) times a year. Interested individuals can call Chairperson Norman Goldstein at 641-0970 for more information.

Sincerely,
Norman Goldstein,
Chairperson
MVMHCA Human Rights Comm.

Dear Larz:

In answer to a letter published in your paper on August 1st.

If "Tuned to People" would turn up the hearing aid a little louder they would know that the $5,000 for fireworks isn't being given by anyone. The money is raised by a group of 13 volunteers who coordinate the efforts of hundreds of other volunteers with their sole purpose to provide the Town with a week of activities, fun, celebration, and the main attraction — a good, old fashioned display of fireworks.

My suggestion to "Tuned to People," if he — she feels that money should be raised for any cause or personal need, organize a group and do it. You will get more satisfaction from accomplishing goals than sitting back and criticizing others through letters to the editor.

Jack Cushing,
Fourth of July Comm.

P.S. I'm so proud of my volunteers that I can even sign my name to letters.

Dear Larz:

I am writing about the rubbish collections here in Wilmington. One day the truck came right after seven to pick up the rubbish on Federal Street. They usually came anywhere from noon to five.

The driver saw my husband and told him they would be coming early from then on. They did — twice, but didn't come yesterday until afternoon.

Isn't there some way a notice could be put in the Town Crier so all this confusion could be avoided?

Respectfully yours,
Mary Helen Fahey

The only 'game' should be on the field

by Rick Cooke

Tewksbury's Pop Warner football program and the youngsters that helped rank that program anywhere from first to seventh nationally over the past 10 years, is being punished by the very organization that should be going out of its way to lend a helping hand in what has become a time of unnecessary crisis.

Nearly sixth months have passed in a battle that has been gummed up by semantics flowing straight from the Eastern Mass. board of Pop Warner.

Former Tewksbury Pop Warner Director Mike Whelton was called before the board of selectmen several months ago when it was alleged that he failed to pay bills that were incurred by the Tewksbury Pop Warner program. Whelton and the Eastern Mass. Board of Directors, of which he is president, declared that the billing problem had been solved.

The Eastern Mass. board gave Whelton (who was at the time still the Tewksbury director), and the records a clean bill of health, but in turn yanked Tewksbury's Pop Warner charter until a board of directors could be formed to run the town's program, since it had been decided (in what was a wise and overdue decision) that a Tewksbury Pop Warner Board of Directors should be formed to help ease the heavy work load shouldered by the director.

Whelton later was removed as Tewksbury director by the recreation commission for the stated reason that he was not helping to prepare the program, and it was getting late into the summer.

A new board of directors was haggled over by the recreation commission and finally set, when it was time for Eastern Mass. to begin coming up with a monthly reason for delaying the reissuing of the charter.

Eastern Mass. wanted Tewksbury Pop Warner to elimate any political involvement (i.e. the board of selectmen); wanted any coaches removed from an inrim board of directors that had been established; and wanted the organization's bylaws submitted in writing.

According to Tewksbury Pop Warner President Robert Lombardi, he has met these recommendations, and yet still received numerous responses from Merrimack Valley League President George Howard that Tewksbury is "not in compliance" with the recommendations of the Eastern Mass. Board of Directors.

Roberta Whelton, Secretary of the Eastern Mass. Board, expressed confusion as to just who her organization was dealing with in a July 5 letter to Thomas Callahan, President of Friends of Tewksbury Pop Warner, a boosters organization formed during Tewksbury's 'reorganization' period.

By this time Eastern Mass. should know just who it is dealing with- an 11 member board of directors headed by one very frustrated Robert Lombardi.

This was Pop Warner

In this photo taken year ago, the Tewksbury Pop Warner A' team linemen prepared for their upcoming season. The Tewksbury teams have been practicing for a week in the hopes of eventually playing under the Pop Warner banner. The season officially opens September 9.

According to Lombardi, as recently as a week ago New England Regional Director Beverly Brown was scheduled to meet with the Eastern Mass Board. She, according to Tewksbury Pop Warner officials, was told by National Pop Warner in Philadelphia not to interfere.

What have the kids done ?

So, what gives ? Why is a program that produced 13 All-Americans and four National Scholar-Athletes last year being punished ? "Pop Warner is for kids," said Tewksbury League Director Ed Blades. "How can they get ticked off at over 200 kids and 13 All-Americans and pull their charter ? These kids have done nothing wrong. I have never seen a letter saying that we don't have a charter. They can't lift the charter without a hearing, and we've never had a hearing."

Surely, Pop Warner National knows what a fine program Tewksbury has produced. And Mike Whelton, who did such a superb job in helping to build this program, sits at the head of Eastern Mass. Board. You would think that he would be right there to give a needed boost to a program that he helped send to the top of the scholastic and athletic charts, no matter what he thinks the town's officials and Pop Warner coaches have done to him.

The kids are the people who count here. The adults, when you think about it, are just along for the ride. Now, the Tewksbury players and cheerleaders are being taken on a ride that they hardly need at this point in their lives.

From political powerplay to a grudge match

What started out as what seemed to be a political powerplay between a board of selectmen that never should have been involved in the first place and the Eastern Mass. Board has evolved into grudge match between adults that will do nothing but wipe out Tewksbury Pop Warner football for the 1984 season.

Sure, Tewksbury can play in another league this year, but why dampen these youngsters' spirits with a black mark that they do not deserve.

Richard Barrelle, Chairman of the Tewksbury Recreation Commission, at one time looked to be a helpful intermediary in this messy situation. Now, with the further delays and the season set to start September 9, any help by Barrelle, Whelton, or any person with genuine concern for these youngsters would be welcome.

Barrelle, in an earlier Recreation Commission meeting, expressed a desire to get to the point of this matter, that being to get the kids back to playing Pop Warner football.

Unfortunately, Barrelle was pointing a finger at the wrong people. "This thing has gotten out of hand because of the press and the politics," he said at the time. "Mr. Howard reads the papers and he brings those papers to his meetings. The cameras are grinding and the selectmen are making grandiose statements to the press. Keep them (selectmen) out of it. Keep the politics out of it."

The selectmen have been out of it for quite some time now, and games are still being played with a sincere group of people (Tewksbury Pop Warner- yes I will call them that) who are trying to prolong an outstanding youth sports tradition.

Barrelle had a plan that could have- and might still- help to bring about a solution to all of this silliness. "I'll prevail on my friendship with Mike Whelton and ask him to help us out," he said some time ago.

Well, Mike is hardly helping at this point, so it is time for Tewksbury football parents to become intensely aware and involved in the situation. This unfortunate standstill has gone on long enough.

Meeting August 8

A meeting of Tewksbury Pop Warner football parents is scheduled for tonight (August 8) at the town hall starting at 8:30 p.m.

A newsletter that features a 1984 Pop Warner schedule (that does not include Tewksbury) will be distributed at this meeting.

Lombardi has a question that he would like answered sometime during this discussion. "We want to ask the parents- what did we do wrong?"

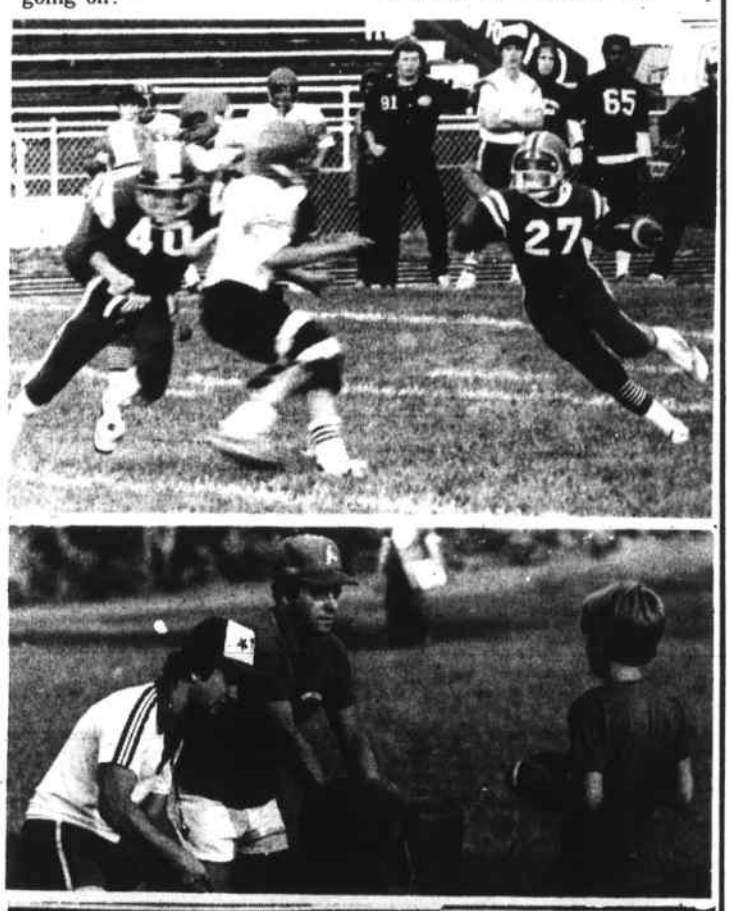

"The parents have to be made aware of our situation and also have the opportunity to voice their opinion," notes Lombardi.

"We've been asked by hundreds of parents, just what is going on?"

The idea of a petition directed at National Pop Warner is a good one if it will help to get the kids back out on to the field under the Pop Warner banner that is so important when it comes to scholastic and athletic recognition.

Despite what has gone on thus far, the Pop Warner name still has strong ties to high standards of achievement.

A Pop Warner program in Tewksbury can only serve to enhance those standards.

Young stars

Former coach Mike Whelton, Jr. (middle photo, white shirt) helped to develop players like John Miller (27) and John DeVivo (33).

Solid coaches

Tewksbury A' team coaches Petros (left) and Indelicato helped to mold players with character and a solid working knowledge of Pop Warner football.

Summer track meets

Future track stars shine

Tewksbury has many fine young track athletes in the making, and quite a few of them have been showing what they can do at the summer track meets. This week's meet, the last of the summer, featured some fine runs and some very close competition.

Probably the most outstanding race was between Lauren Andriolo and Maureen Forsyth in the girls' (age nine-11) mile. They were within a few yards of each other the whole way, but Lauren had a bit more kick. Their times of 6:51 and 6:55 were excellent for girls in their age group.

Another fine mile was turned in by Corey Cameron, who also won the 440 and anchored his team's winning relay. Corey runs with good form and power and looks to have a bright future in track.

Everyone who won a ribbon, and many who did not, looked like budding young athletes. Hopefully, everyone had a good time just competing.

A special thanks this week to some of the parents who pitched in to time and award ribbons. Thanks to Louise and Bob Kelley, and Anthony Kondoleon.

Fall dedication for two memorials

Two memorials for Wilmington servicemen killed in Vietnam will be dedicated this fall, according to Fred Shine, commander of the Wilmington chapter of the Disabled American Veterans.

A memorial for Robert Parent will be dedicated in front of the old Town Hall in September. Shine is still looking for a site for a memorial for John Rich, but would like to have that memorial dedicated by the end of October.

They would be the third and fourth such memorials in Wilmington. A memorial was dedicated at Silver Lake last year for John Fullerton, and the Richard Welch Memorial was dedicated two years ago at the end of Bridge Lane.

Robert Parent grew up on Clifton Street in Wilmington. He went to Vietnam with the 1st Air Cavalry Division as a gunner on a helicopter, and was killed on July 21, 1968.

Shine plans to bring Mr. and Mrs. Parent to Wilmington from Florida for the dedication ceremony.

The memorial for Parent is being paid for by the Wilmington Company of Minutemen, which will also provice honor guards at the dedication. Several members of that organization are Vietnam veterans.

Each of the four memorials is a piece of Wilmington granite from the old foundation of Jenks Bridge. When new culverts were installed three years ago to carry the waters of the Ipswich River under Woburn Street, Highway Superintendent Bob Palmer put aside the granite blocks, and later offered them for the memorials.

Each memorial bears a name plate of black granite, cut from the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C. during its construction. The soldier's name on each appears just as it is on the national memorial. The Wilmington memorials were the first in the nation to make such use of the cuttings from the national memorial. The idea came from Bob Palmer, after he read in a newspaper that the cuttings were available.

Shine said that he would like to hear from anyone with an idea of where to place the memorial for John Rich. Rich grew up on Main Street near Butters Row, and spent much of his time at his father's garage at the intersection of Lowell and Main Streets. A Marine, Rich was killed in 1966, Wilmington's first Vietnam casualty.

On-site meeting

The Wilmington Planning Board meets every Tuesday evening in the Town Hall. Except in the summer.

During the summer months the planning board meets only twice a month. There was no meeting this week a a consequence.

But there was an informal meeting. Members travelled down to the intersectin of Woburn Street and Industrial Way to inspect the site of a proposed addition to a building. They wanted to check on visibility, for drivers of autos, if the addition were to be erected.

The members also went to a site off Swain Road, to inspect property owned by David and Beverly Fuller. The couple is planning a housing subdivision on what is called Quarry Hill.

Time stands still as town clock stops

The hands on the town clock read 1:05, which means that it is only correct twice a day. The clock stopped on July 19.

The clock, located in the steeple of the Congregational Church, is cared for by James and David Roberts, twin brothers who have a business in Wilmington called the Clockfolk of New England. By unfortunate coincidence, the clock stopped the day before their father's funeral.

On investigating the stopped clock, David Roberts found that the mechanism was not jammed, but apparently the motor had burned out. It was very hot.

After telling the building department that a new motor was needed, they waited for instructions — and it seems that the building department was also waiting for them to call. After receiving the okay for a new motor, which should cost about $75, they encountered another delay. When they returned to the church, they found a fresh coat of paint on the stairs leading to the choir loft and the clock.

The brothers are now trying to work the repair into their busy schedule. Presently they are reconstructing the hands of a church clock in Littleton. Theirs is a specialized trade, and their services are much in demand.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending August 7, Wilmington police officers responded to seven accidents, 18 alarms, six disturbances and four incidents of suspicious activity.

Nine arrests were made, other departments were assisted, four larcenies were reported along with two breaks. Two domestic problems were quieted, medical assistance was rendered, and two protective custody detentions were made.

One trespassing complaint, one traffic complaint and three complaints involving trailbikes were logged along with one liquor related problem. Four vehicles were reported stolen, two stolen vehicles were recovered and three incidents of vandalism were invedstigated.

Arrests

Early Thursday morning Officer Pat King arrested a Reading man on charges of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. William Esposito, 19, of Franklin Street was charged and bailed for a Friday court appearance.

Around 3 a.m. Friday, Officer King arrested John Brown, 24, of Abbott Street, Lawrence after a computer check revealed a North Reading arrest warrant. He was turned over to North Reading officers.

Friday evening the department's Special Enforcement Unit was on the road making several arrests. Michael Lynch, 18, of Boston Avenue, Medford was arrested and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol. James Silva, 19 of Shawsheen Avenue was also charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol. Both were arrested by officers King and Hancock.

Sgt. Palmer and Officer Duffy arrested Walter Sennett, 25, of Ridgewood Rd., Billerica charging him with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol plus numerous motor vehicle violations.

Two other arrests Friday evening by officers King and Hancock were Dennis Higgins, 17, of Michigan Road, Tewksbury who was charged with possession of a stolen inspection sticker; and Aaron Gesin, 17, of Martha Avenue, Tewksbury was charged with under age possession of liquor.

Early Saturday morning Philip Soloman, 26, of Salem Street was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and failure to keep to the right of the roadway. The arrest was made by officers King and Hancock.

Warrant arrests Saturday evening by Officer Steve Parsons included James Dawe, 22, of Silverhurst Avenue on the strength of a default warrant issued by the State Police at Andover.

David Forester, 19, of Woburn Street was arrested by Officer Bill Gable on a State Police default warrant issued out of Weston barracks.

James Stanley, of Phillips Street, Methuen was arrested by Salisbury Police on a Wilmington default warrant Saturday evening.

Monday night William Richard of Third Street, Lowell was arrested by Lowell police on a capias warrant issued by Wilmington officers Redding and White. He was transported to a local lockup pending a court appearance.

Default warrants

These warrants are being issued by the local district court upon non-payment of minor motor vehicle traffic tickets. Anyone given a citation by a police officer is given 10 days to either pay the fine or ask for a hearing in the local court.

If no action is taken by the offender, the court issues a warrant for that person's arrest. It would be wise for anyone who has received a traffic citation recently to make sure the fine is paid before a police officer comes knocking on the door.

Accident on Industrial Way

A Lowell woman was critically injured in an accident at 11:35 p.m. Monday on Industrial Way in Wilmington. Thai Cao, 40, of Franklin Street, Lowell was trapped in a car for nearly two hours after it hit a pole. She was taken to Brigham and Women's Hospital, in critical condition. Her son, Minh Duong, who was driving the car, was also injured and taken to Winchester Hospital where he is listed in fair condition. He will be charged with speeding and driving as to endanger. Another passenger was treated and released. The three, all employees of Portex, Inc., had just been released from work.

Whist party Monday

The first whist party of August will be held in the Drop-in Center Monday afternoon, August 13 beginning at 1:00 p.m. Those planning to participate should try to be on time. The arts and crafts committee has extended its appreciation to the Rotary Club for the donation of the $25 monthly raffle gift check and the Kiwanis Club for donating the monthly money envelopes for prizes.

Minibus busy

There has been a large increase in the number of requests for transportation in the minibus. Wilmington covers over 17 square miles and calls come into the office from all over the town for rides. Priority for service is directed toward doctor and hospital visits. It is well to remember that because a call is for a visit to a doctor's office does not constitute a reason for private taxi service. It is possible that two or more people will need to be transported to several different doctors in and out of the town at the same time.

Therefore, to assist all seniors involved, might mean that some will be riding with the driver or other seniors until they reach their appointment. When calling for a ride home, the same conditions could exist. Seniors are asked to remember it is dificult for the office scheduling these runs and for the drivers to meet all the calls for transportation

Many surrounding towns are charging a fee for the use of the van. Wilmington is trying to avoid this. It would be appreciated if seniors who have cars at their disposal would use them, thus freeing the minibus for those who live alone and have no transportation.

When shopping in the minibus, seniors are allowed only one bundle which can be held on the lap. Bundles in the aisle could be the cause of accidents. Cooperation will be a huge help in transporting all those who seek help in getting to their appointments on time.

New health plan

Those who are on Medicaid and are 65 or older and don't have a doctor of their own, may be interested in a new health plan available to them. It is called The Health Connection, and is being offered at the North Billerica Regional Health Center. The plan emphasizes a family doctor style of medical care. If however, a specialist is needed, the doctor treating the patient will make a referral. Twenty-four hour service is available and after hours and weekends a telephone line is available to reach the doctor. Transportation is available through an outreach worker. Call Barbara Nowak at 663-6666 for information.

A Stinson auction: guaranteed success

By JIM ROUILLARD

The palaver is there, and the wit — the bargains, beauties and busts — the quickened pulse and hope for unexpected treasure — all part of a traveling road show called an auction.

But Carl Stinson of Reading takes auction well beyond road show — if a recent example is any guage — to a higher level of excitement, almost to fiesta.

Stinson, auctioneer and appraiser, at 49, is a walking, jogging, running, racing human dynamo. He has long been known for his auctioneering talents and flamboyance among Middlesex and Essex County locals, and throughout the length and breadth of the eastern seabord.

A visit to one of his performances — for there can be no other word to describe it — explains why.

A silk shawl, a knuckle-arm Windsor chair, an 18th-century tavern table, an enormous, revolting rug, an ironing board, a pink 1962 Cadillac, an exquisite teak and ivory box from the British India trade: these comprise just a sampling from a Stinson auction held recently for the heirs of a 97-year-old Wellesley woman.

The auction, replete with catered refreshments, discreet tent and folding chairs, toilet facility and pre-auction review of the goods, took place on the lawn of a handsome stucco house set among rhododendron and Solomon's Seal.

The preview began at 8:30 a.m. and lasted for about an hour and a half: a time to obtain a bidding number — time for touching and looking — for preselection: which item would the octogenarian grandmother bid on? Which would appeal to the youngsters in tow?

A tall, strapping Wellesley policeman stood by, symbol and guarantee of order.

They came in BMWs and on foot; they came in ramshackle Volkswagen bugs. They came to bid, to watch and to listen, to smile, to eat and to laugh. And they came by the hundreds, from everywhere and all over: manicured matrons and middleaged preppies, the bearded, moustached and clean-shaven, the carefully coifed elders and rangy teenage boys and girls.

And, throughout, came the hustling and bustling of the Stinson crew: moving furniture, setting up chairs, asking and answering in moderate shouts, the stentorian tones of one man, Carl Stinson, predominant over all.

The novice bidders milled about, while the veterans — their choices made — staked out their seats and waited on events.

"Is he the auctioneer?" asked one. "Seems aggressive; asked me to move aside."

"He's probably under a lot of pressure. He was carrying a bureau and you were standing in his way."

"Efficient and high-powered, but not pushy," said a third.

"I've heard that he's fair, and amusing."

The auction was set to begin now, a bare, three minutes late: an on-site, retail auction, which Carl Stinson said is the very best kind.

But first, a few brief announcements:

"Auctions are not a place for children," he said. "In fact, it's so crowded here today — I'm not sure it's a place for people at all."

He explained that to set up the auction required a certificate guaranteeing the awning was flameproof — and two building permits to put up the tent.

"No one is allowed behind the auctioneer during bidding," Stinson said (a ground-rule he had to repeat often for the inattentive or uncaring wanderers who wanted to pick among the merchandise after the auction began.

Registration during the preview entailed showing identification to obtain a bidding number. Business is cash (or valid check) and carry, Stinson said, and "A bidding number does not mean you get Master Charge."

With final announcement: a few deletions from the advertised goods (a last-minute decision by heirs), upcoming Stinson auctions this week in Winchester, Stoneham and Rowley, and the happy news that a Stinson auction carries no buyer's premium charge, the auction, the thrills and the action was set to begin.

It had rained and the grass was wet with heavy, glistening dew — which proved a cool blessing under the tent as the morning heat advanced. Though there weren't quite enough seats to accommodate the 500-plus people who showed up — there was comfortable standing room under the tent. The preview and auction — a nine-hour experience — saw people come and go, break to stretch their legs, prick up their ears or gripe at a chance to bid missed, laugh at a Stinson quip and groan in collective pleasure when the choicest pieces appeared.

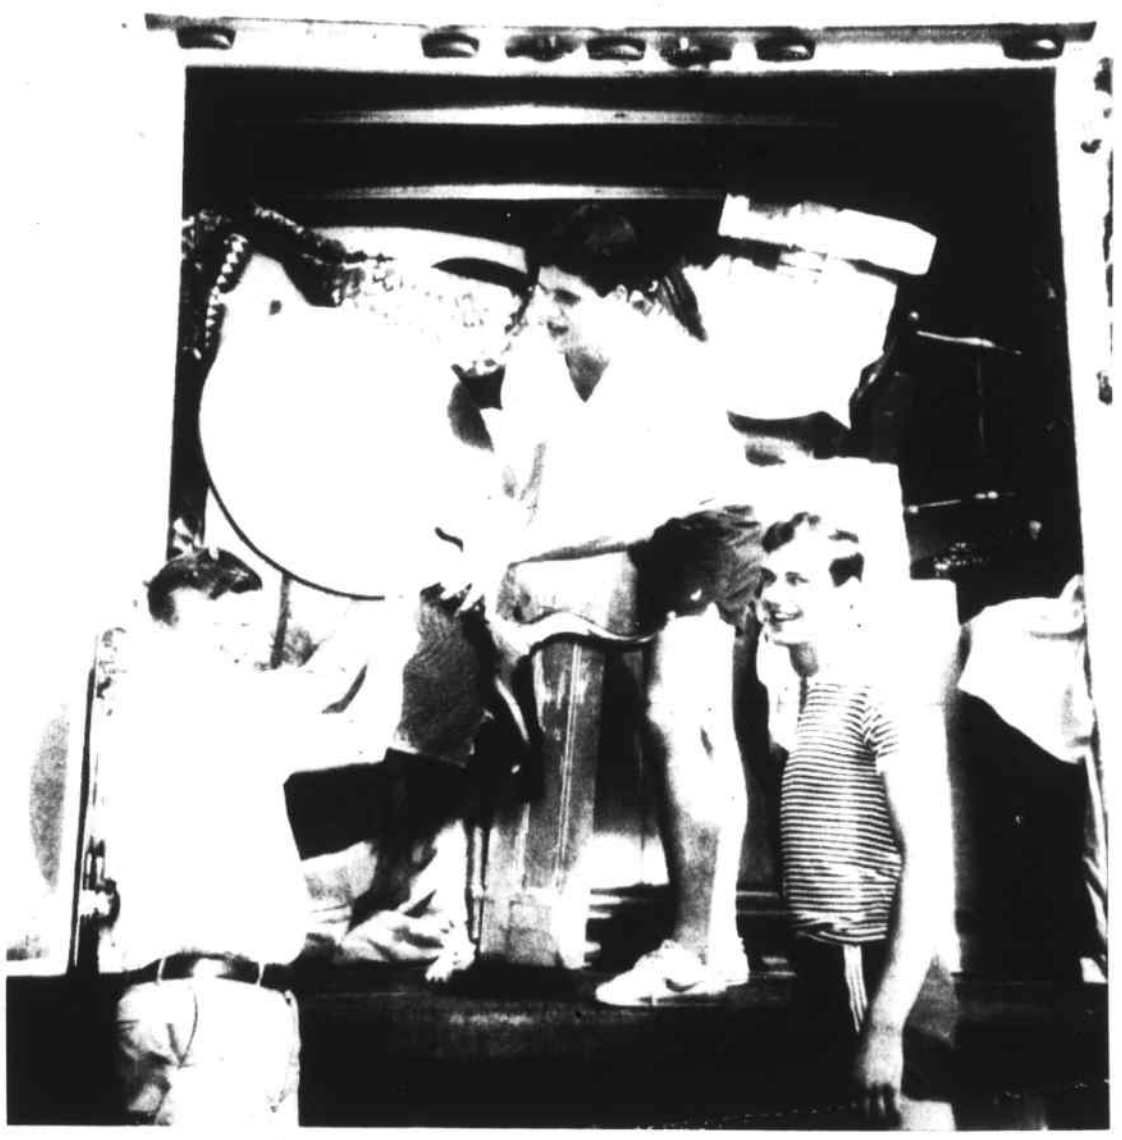

Items went for as little as three dollars, as much as four thousand.

Good humor and good nature prevailed, with the upbeat interlacings of Stinson wit, from master auctioneer Carl and his apprentices: son Doug and neighbor Paul MacCausland, who also auctioned goods when Carl's bellows-strong lungs needed brief rest.

Carl's wife Brenda and her sister Maura Campbell kept the books, kept the money, and kept watch over Carl, supplying details and data when needed.

His assistants, Marshall Brown, a summer visitor from England and Colby College student David Blake, along with Doug and Paul (when they weren't auctioneering) moved and delivered goods to the bidders, hoisted ponderous breakfronts and chests-on-chests and

Miles from Home

May I introduce to you a new book, titled "Miles from Home." It is a gripping story which will share with you the emotional experiences of a young girl's survival in Vietnam. What makes this book special? It demonstrates the kindness of many people, people just like yourself who have helped many unfortunate ones to find happiness. It also points out how a positive attitude can help you to accept disappointments, and continue to live with a friendly smile.

As you begin to travel with Anna from North Vietnam to South Vietnam, then from Saigon to America, you will experience the sadness, confusion, loneliness, and joy. Also you will learn about her culture and want to join her in many moving experiences. After eighteen years in darkness, Anna underwent an experimental eye surgery. When she saw the bright light, she expressed her feelings in these words:

"Three days later when the patch was removed, I saw some light. Beams of hope flared from my heart again. I felt as if I were a bird perching on top of the universe and began to smile.

I smile with the mountain,
I smile with the sea.
I smile with all things around me."

Run and eat binge- - - -

The average American consumes about 1,800 to 2,500 calories daily to maintain his or her body weight.

But during six days in July, 31 men and women ate about 10,000 calories a day and still lost weight.

The group comprised the participants in the Six Day Run, a race that is just what the name implies — whoever can run the farthest in six days is the winner.

"When you run 50 to 100 miles a day, your caloric demands are enormous," said Vince Ciappetti of the New York Road Runners Club, who oversaw the Del Monte-sponsored kitchen that supplied the runners. "The race is a huge running and eating binge."

Potatoes, bananas, other fresh fruits and vegetables, light canned fruits, regular and no-salt added canned vegetables, and fruit juices are the preferred foods of the ultra-distance runners.

Bananas are a particular favorite, and the runners devoured 800 pounds of Del Monte bananas, an average of 25 pounds per entrant. The fruit is easy to digest, high in natural fruit sugar and rich in potassium, all of which makes bananas ideal for runners.

"After a while, every cell in the body craves food," Chiappetta said. "We got requests from the runners for everything from fish and chips to chopped liver."

In addition to bananas, the runners ate their way through about 500 pounds of potatoes, 60 cases of canned fruits and vegetables, and about $12,000 worth of other foods ranging from mundane to the exotic.

The winner of the race, 28-year old Yiannis Kouros of Greece, shattered the world record for a six-day run. The sports arena manager covered more than 635 miles.

Sports nutritionists compute that a person burns about 100 calories per mile of running. Kouros likely used at least 63,500 calories during his record run, which may well be the most calories ever consumed by a normal-size individual in that time frame.

Chiappetta and his crew were kept busy during the race preparing soups, boiling potatoes, fixing fruit salads, frying pancakes and occasionally surprising the weary runners with chicken, bluefish and pastries.

"The food has to be easy to digest, taste good and supply the energy the runners need to keep going," Chiappetta said.

Leftys have their day!

The nation's 30 million lefthanders will want to mark their calendars to remind themselves that Monday, August 13, is International Lefthanders Day. The day was first designated in 1976, by Lefthanders International (LHI), which publishes the world's only magazine for lefthanded people. The purpose of Lefthanders Day is to promote awareness of the needs and interests of lefties. This year LHI marks the occasion with a brand new line of mail order products.

LHI founder Dean R. Campbell explained that since the organization began, LHI's focus has been on the need for lefties to be able to function comfortably in a world where the majority of people are righthanded. For nine years, LHI has made research, entertainment and consumer information available to the public as well as publishing the bimonthly magazine, Lefty, which on August 13, will be officially renamed Lefthander Magazine.

Over the years, one of the main concerns of lefties has continually proven to be where to buy products designed for Lefthanded use. This International Lefthanders Day, LHI is meeting that need with an entire new line of products, tested for quality and durability, that can be ordered by mail. Items are advertised in the Catalog section of the magazine, and subscribers are entitled to a 20 percent discount on prices of all products.

Lefthanders International is also making available pin-on Lefthanders Day buttons for lefties to wear on their special day. The colorful buttons sport the admonition "Don't Be Left Out," the date and day, and the words Lefthanders International.

Subscriptions to Lefthander Magazine for one year (six issues) cost $15. International Lefthanders Day buttons cost $1 each. Write to: Lefthanders International, Dept. 13, P.O. Box 8249, Topeka, Ks. 66608.

READING'S CARL STINSON: Auctioneer extraordinaire, appraiser, human dynamo, who seems to pack into one day what it might take others two days to accomplish. Stinson has been holding auctions for more than 20 years, locally, and up and down the eastern seaboard.

Auctioneer

raised heavy rugs for the eager eyes of the bidders.

The merchandise was bid up pretty fast, in most cases — but slow if a piece didn't appeal, like a lavendar gourd-shaped lamp which finally caught when Carl said, "We've got the shade."

"The only time I like kids at auctions is when they're in pictures," he quipped, holding up a print of some cherubs. Then, "Put the kids in this blanket chest if they get noisy."

Carl Stinson's attention can include several items at once, it would seem: while reeling off bids for a chest, he tapped one of his assistants, interjecting "Get the bed; get the bed," then returned to the latest bid on the chest.

"The more you pay the better you'll like it," he said. Then, when the box of jewelry reached a $50 bid, "It's junk after all," he added, and "Do you wear this, sir?"

When a small blanket chest came up for offers, he suggested "Your money can fit in this one, since the other was much too big."

What sometimes puzzles observers, his wife Brenda said, is Carl's ability to remember individual items — in almost photographic memory-catalogue in his head. How does he do it? "Well, take the round, glass-topped wicker table that was next to the bushes," he said. "I remembered that the table was a-ROUND the rhododendrons."

However he does it, he does it, and very successfully, too. He describes his profession as still exciting and fast-paced, after 20 years plus in the business. He said he entered the trade after inspiration from another auctioneer, whose credibility and sincerity were a good reflection on an industry which people sometimes may "view with a squinty or jaundiced eye."

Stinson said he still maintains a policy of no buyer's premium (some auctioneers require a 10 percent surcharge from the buyer, he said, in addition to the bid price and state sales tax.) He added that during his more than two decades at auctioneering and appraisals he has not changed his commission policy and sees no buyer's premium in future for Stinson auctions. He does envision a future of increasing efforts by larger auctioneering firms to "muscle out the smaller entrepreneur," but, he said, "We believe our system can and will work forever. Our auctions are one of the best and most efficient ways to establish full and fair market value for merchandise, just like tobacco, U. S. Treasury certificates and furs sold at auction."

Carl Stinson loves his profession. "It's full of fun and enjoyment," he said, with new experiences every day. And every day can be beautiful. Even bad circumstances can be turned to good, if you make the absolute most of each situation."

The Stinson family and crew seem like giant, efficient bees: ever busy and cheerful, buzzing without wasted motion from item to item, and chore to chore, apparently patient through all. The time is precious, the work is accomplished, the most is made of each minute.

But where do all the strength and the stamina derive? Carl said he built his tremendous lungs through sports and physical exercise during his high school years: he took up running in the early 1950s, he said, doing a hundred miles a week in those days and he also appeared in national and international 50-kilometer heel-and-toe competition, ranking variously third to sixth nationally in his hey-day.

He added that he might be accurately described as "hyper." A typical day might include rising at four a.m. to do an estate appraisal, then picking a gallon of blueberries before breakfast and, of course, making the blueberry pancakes himself.

That would leave him the rest of the day: morning, afternoon, and night, to get some work done.

AUCTIONEER'S APPRENTICE, ski jumper, and serious athlete, Doug Stinson is learning his father's trade and loving it. The St. Lawrence University student was captain of his prep school football team, but feels lacrosse is his best sport.

This September

Sail the coast of Maine

September winds are nature's reward after a long, hot summer. The Maine Windjammer Association offers sailing under the clear autumn skies of New England on one of thirteen authentic 19th & 20th century schooners as the perfect vacation for early fall.

What a unique way to view the fall foliage this year! The fire-red and orange leaves of trees along the Maine coast are illuminated by the autumn sunsets. The whales, your silent escorts, swim lazily alongside the ships. Flocks of Canada geese bask in the Indian summer sun. The beauty continues into the night as the northern lights shower cool radiance against the black velvet skies. Reach out and catch one of those shooting stars!

Sit back and surrender to the fresh September winds as they send your schooner in and out of the quiet, romantic coves of Penobscot Bay. Now that the summer crowds have gone, this is the perfect time to relax and unwind on the open sea. Or if you are really a sailor at heart, you are welcome to help navigate, hoist the sails, or even take the ship's wheel.

Without a doubt the most economical adventure you'll embark on this summer or fall, cruises range from $325 to $425 per person. The Maine Windjammers, renowned for their savory New England cuisine, will serve three hearty, home-cooked meals a day, included in the price of travel. The highlight each week is an authentic Maine Lobster Bake. Crew and passengers row ashore to build a fire, fill a washtub with sea water, seaweed and lobster and sit back to wait for the feast. Can't you just taste the succulent white meat inside those bright red shells? Top it off with camp coffee, fresh watermelon and homemade pies, warm from the galley ovens.

At the end of this very special week, return to land revitalized in spirit, mind and body. For more information on this wonderful Maine vacation experience, contact the Maine Windjammer Association. Write or call: The Maine Windjammer Association, Box 317P, Rockport, Maine 04856, telephone (207) 236-4867.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

My wife asked the dress store manager if she could try on the blue dress in the window. "Please do," he replied, "it may stir up a little business."

There isn't a high school coach in the world worth $40,000 a year just to have a winning football team. Give the money to a top-notch English or Science instructor so that their students can contribute something worthwhile to our towns, cities, and nation. Football, baseball, and all other sports too — play the games for fun and exercise. Try to win, sure, but if you don't — who cares — as long as you've played honest, fair and square. I would rather see champions in education the product of our schools than a genius in throwing or catching a forward pass. You have the right to a different opinion — my Aunt Maria always has, even before I write or say a thing.

A workman was perched on a step-ladder adjusting a clock in the Woburn Courthouse when a nosey kind of guy asked, "Whatcha doing — is something wrong with the clock?" "No," said the man, trying to keep his cool. "I'm just a little nearsighted."

In a recent Woodchips column I made a mistake. I promoted Francis Downes to Circulation Manager of the Wilmington Town Crier, a position rightfully belonging to a very wonderful lady, Cathy Pacini. I thank you, Cathy, and especially Larz F. Neilson, for sending me a copy of the Town Crier every week. Other area papers, please copy.

Congratulations to Wilfred Lemos of Wilmington, who celebrated his 87th birthday. Wilfred is a retired piano tuner. I have never been musically inclined, but my mother insisted that I learn to play some instrument. So I took piano lessons but was really terrible. One day while practicing, my next-door neighbor couldn't stand my playing any longer and barged into my house with an axe and exclaimed, "Try this on your piano!" For my birthday that kind-hearted neighbor gave me a mute present — a fiddle with 'no strings attached.'

There are many wonderful people in the Middlesex East area and two of the finest are Bill and Mary Burton. They have five children — three boys and two girls — who, with their parents, form a mutual admiration society. Bill Burton is a 30-year Navy Veteran, serving in many capacities, one of which was chief yeoman aboard the carrier USS Wasp, of Air Squadron 86. (I have a personal love for the Wasp, working on her flight deck for over a year.) One of the most important assignments for Bill was when he became a recruiting officer in Boston. The Navy chooses only the very best in appearance, personality and superior physical, mental and moral qualities. Bill carries those splendid attributes into civilian life as an outstanding husband, father and friend and neighbor to all.

M.D.C. officer Eugene Courtney is in charge of those police dogs you have perhaps seen off to the side of the Stone Zoo in Stoneham. These dogs are specially trained for various duties and they respect and obey 'Gene' and his commands. Boy, how I wish my dog would obey me! He takes 'me' for a walk every evening!

My dog was running around and around in circles when a friend asked, "what the heck is the matter with that mutt? Why is he doing that?" "Boy," I said, "you don't know very much about dogs — he's a 'watchdog' and he's 'winding' himself up!"

Today is the tomorrow we worried about yesterday.

Wayne Higden was wearing kilts at a Scottish reunion when a kind, elderly lady timidly asked him, "Sir, I have wondered for years — is anything 'worn' under those kilts?" Wayne smiled then said, "No, ma'am, everything is in brand new condition."

I have an uncle on my father's side in Italy who is well over 90 years old, but he's still out every day on the Via Veneto 'pinching.'

Two cousins of mine, Maureen and Mary Jane Hurley, were members of St. Patrick's Church Choir many years ago. One summer they went on a deep-sea fishing trip and the boat tipped over and they and two other sopranos were nearly lost on the 'high C's.'

Folks, speaking of singing, the parishioners of St. Charles' Church in Woburn must have heard by this time the beautiful lyric tenor voice of Father John Mericantante. When he was assigned to St. Anthony's Church, he heard me try out for the choir. "Woodchipper," he said, "with that voice you would be perfect singing solo." I was so happy to hear that compliment that I ran home to tell my mother that at last there was something musical that I was good at. My ego was unceremoniously deflated when Father John told me that he didn't mean for me to sing 'solo,' but 'so low,' no one could hear me. Well, Luciano Pavarotti, I thought I was going to replace you!

A fine young gentleman, Christopher Ham from Woburn, and two beautiful young ladies, Michele Nottebart and Mary Jane Seaberg from Stoneham, are helping us at the FDA Lab in Winchester for the summer. They are industrious, energetic, conscientious workers. America, you shall continue to be the greatest nation in the world with wonderful and dedicated workers like these and many like them throughout our country. God bless them.

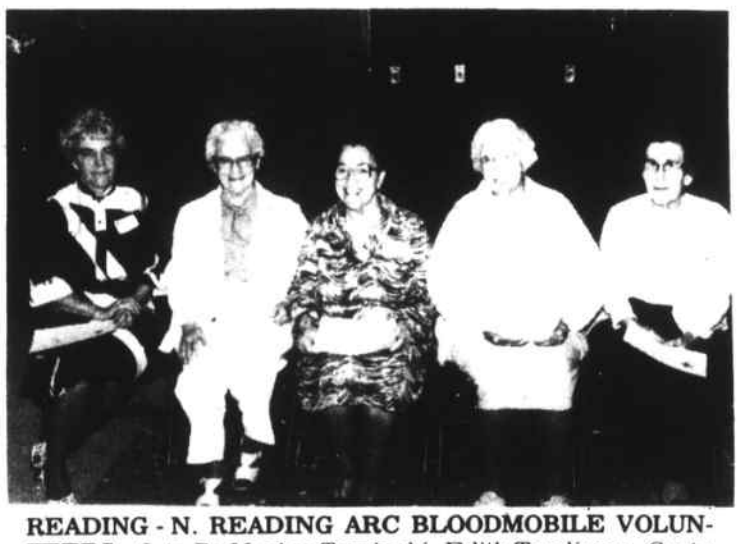

I'm giving some of the people I've kidded in this column a chance to get back at me. Ed Baratta of Winchester said: "Woodchipper, you ought to go to Hollywood, the 'walk' would do you good." Richard Needham asked: "Is that your nose or are you eating a banana?" Nancy Sullivan: "When your wife met you, it must have been 'love at first fright'." Abbott Rowe: "That's a nice suit you're wearing — it's amazing what they can do with burlap potato bags these days." Jane Driscoll: "Your poor wife — she must have married you for better or worse — you couln't have done any better and she couldn't have done any worse. My Aunt Maria: "How can you have such thin hair on such a fat head?" There are more, folks, but I'm tired of them myself.

"SAY IT NOW"

Don't write the words 'I Love You Dear' and put them in a book.
Don't place them on a shelf so high that they won't get another look.
Go, tell the one you care about, your mother, wife or friend,
That you love them so very much and hope it will never end.
Bring these words to them today, they have meaning when they're said.
They'll be happier if you say them now — they can't hear them when they're dead.

MOTHER — TO — MOTHER

The next meeting of Mother-to-Mother will feature a free Beauty Fitness Workshop given by the John Dellaria Salon of Lexington on Tuesday, August 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Congregational Church, Bedford and Lexington Streets, Burlington.

The workshop will include demonstrations of the basics of beautiful hair, the best in classics and the first in new hair fashions, permanent wave tips and styling ideas, and exciting summer color ideas. Experts will demonstrate all this and more on you and your friends. The beauty fitness workshop includes complimentary products, two $25 gift certificates as door prizes, and a courtesy card towards your next visit.

A question and answer period will be included, and refreshments will be served. The meeting is open to the public free of charge, although contributions are appreciated to help defray expenses.

Mother-to-Mother is a local support group primarily geared toward mothers of infants, toddlers and preschoolers, but welcomes all parents to attend meetings. Membership is encouraged for anyone interested, and monthly meetings are held on the second Tuesday of each month at the United Church of Christ Congregational, corner of Lexington and Bedford Streets in Burlington. For more information call Valorie at 273-1757 or Julie at 273-2889.

POTTERY

"How to Make Pottery," the basic techniques of shaping pottery forms from clay, will be demonstrated by Elaine Peterson of the Lexington Arts and Crafts Society on Sunday, August 12 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington. This free demonstration is being held in conjunction with the current museum exhibit, "Unearthing New England's Past: The Ceramic Evidence," on view at the museum through January 13, 1985. For more information, call the museum at 861-6559.

SINGERS' WORKSHOP

The Treble Chorus of New England announces that the eighth Annual Singers' Workshop will be held at South Church in Andover August 13-18. Summer home of the regional Treble Chorus of New England, the Workshop welcomes musically-talented boys and girls ages 8-15. The Workshop will meet daily 9-2 culminating in a concert on Saturday evening.

Under the direction of its founder Marie Stultz the Singers' Workshop is widely known for its high standards of classical music instruction. Ms. Stultz of North Reading is founder and artistic director of the parent choir The Treble Chorus of New England and is co-music director of the famed Old North Church in Marblehead. She is an active composer and conductor, with many private voice students.

Students who attend the Singers' Workshop may elect to audition for the Treble Chorus of New England 1984-1985 concert season. This past performance season included concerts at Hammond Castle in Gloucester, Phillips Academy in Andover, a television appearance on Channel 5, a "30's and 40's" performance and a spring Brahms and Britten concert. On May 30 the Treble Chorus collaborated with Boston Musica Viva and M.I.T. Advanced Center for Visual Studies to present the American premier of Paul Earls's contemporary opera "Icarus". It featured a laser display, computer-synthesized music, giant inflatable sculpture and chamber ensemble in addition to the Treble Chorus. All were under the direction of Richard Pittman.

Musically-trained young people who enjoy choral and solo singing and would like an exciting music experience in the summer should seriously consider attending Singers' Workshop. Classes will be offered in vice, theory, music appreciation and classical choral repetoire. Spaces are now very limited. Please make an appointment with Marie Stultz, Upton Road, North Reading (664-4705) for an audition.

The three-part tape focuses on the arrival from the "old country", home life and attitudes in Lowell's ethnic communities, and women in the workplace.

SEPT ENROLLMENT

Immediate admissions decisions on September enrollment at "Middlesex Community Coollege will be available Monday through Thursday, August 13-16, from 8 A.M. — 8 P.M. at the North Campus Admissions Office. Director of Admissions, Arthur Parlin, has scheduled the week "to offer people an opportunity to discuss the variety of academic programs, to discover the many scheduling options available and, in most cases, to receive an immediate decision on Admission for September."

Both Parlin and Assistant Director of Admission, Phyllis Johnson, will provide pre-admissions counseling, preliminary transcript evaluation and assistance in completing the admission application on the 8 A.M. — 8 P.M. schedule. No appointment necessary. Applicants need only bring the $14 application fee.

The college can still offer enrollment in two high technology programs, Computer Electronic Technology and Drafting. In the Division of Business Administration, Computer Programming and Operations, new programs on Hotel-Restaurant Management and Paralegal Studies, and concentrations in marketing, management, retailing, accounting and fashion merchandising are available. In the Health Careers Division Radiologic Technology has some openings and in Office Education students may pursue secretarial concentrations in the medical, legal, executive or word processing areas.

Director of Financial Aid, Milton Kerstein, notes that financial aid is still available for the fall semester, and that part-time as well as full-time students are eligible to receive aid. "Too many people count themselves out of the financial aid process without realizing how many types of aid the college can offer. Some students will need immediate tuition assistance to enroll for September and in many cases we can provide that. For others, tuition assistance in the form of grants or loans can provide aid for expenses such as books, transportation, and supplies."

The college's tuition rate will be lower than initially anticipated this year, first semester tuition will be $336.00. For those who apply for financial aid now, a preliminary decision will be available prior to the start of classes. Final decisions are usually available within six weeks.

For further information on Immediate Admissions Decision Week, contact the Middlesex Community College Office of Admissions at 275-8910, ext. 226 or 227.

Where are the Blueberries?

The blueberry season is underway and the outlook is promising! Picking began the second week in July and should last until early September.

Here in Massachusetts, there are a number of farms where you can "pick-your-own" native blueberries. For a list and a copy of a new blueberry recipe leaflet, write the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, Ma. 02202.

Blueberries are grown primarily in the southeastern sections of the state, with planting on the Cape and in Norfolk, Worcester, and Middlesex counties. A total of 2 to 3,000 acres of blueberries are planted in the Bay State with each acre producing about 5 to 6,000 quarts of berries. The deluge of rain in early June did not damage crops and in fact may have helped increase the size of the bushes.

When selecting blueberries at farmers markets, roadside stands, retail supermarkets, and pick-your-own farms, look for berries with a dark blue color and a silvery bloom. This bloom acts as a natural protective waxy coating. Choose berries that are plump, firm and dry. Berries held too long after picking take on the appearance of over-ripe fruit.

Blueberries, like many of the fruits we eat, are high in vitamin C. One cup of berries provides half the recommended dietary allowance of this vitamin. Low in calories, one cupful has only 85. Blueberries can be stored up to one week in the refrigerator. Place unwashed berries in a shallow container and cover. Wash berries just before using.

To enjoy the flavor of blueberries all year round, consider freezing them. Blueberries can be frozen as is or made into a syrup pack. The North American Blueberry Council recommends the following way to freeze blueberries: sort through blueberries and remove damaged berries, leaves and twigs. Place berries on a flat tray and freeze solid. As soon as the berries are frozen solid, pour out into a container. Frozen this way, berries will not stick together and will pour out of the container like marbles. These tray-frozen berries should be washed just before serving.

A syrup pack for freezing blueberries is made by dissolving 3 cups of sugar in 4 cups of cold water. Pack four quarts fresh berries into containers and cover with cold syrup. Leave head space for expansion: pints—½-inch, quarts—1 inch. Seal, label, and freeze.

The versatility of the blueberry is well known! They are small and convenient to add as is to muffin mixes, biscuits, pancakes, or waffles. Combine them with strawberries, raspberries, watermelon, and bananas for a fruit compote or add blueberries to vanilla yogurt and sprinkle with wheat germ for a nutritious snack.

Try this blueberry sauce topping for all your dessert ideas!

FRESH BLUEBERRY SAUCE
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons cornstarch
½ cup water
1 pint blueberries
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt. Stir in water and add berries. Bring to a boil, simmer until clear and thickened, about 4 minutes. Remove from heat and add lemon juice and rind. Chill. Serve on ice cream, puddings, waffles, or pancakes.

MOVIE REVIEWS — Rochelle Flynn

"The Last Starfighter" and "Phar Lap"

"The Last Starfighter," starring Robert Preston, Lance Guest, Dan O'Herlihy, and Catherine Mary Stewart. Directed by Nick Castle Jr. Rated PG (violence, mild profanity).

For example, there is Alex Rogan (Lance Guset), a nice guy who dreams of taking his equally nice girlfriend (Catherine Mary Stewart) by the hand and finding an adventure or two before life passes them by. But, he never expected that when he became world champion of the Last Starfighter video game, he would be leaving the seedy Starlite Starbrite trailer court to follow that old snake charmer, Robert Preston, into an intergalactic gun fight.

Alex is a reluctant hero and is sarcastically told that he would "save the whales, but not the universe." One of the reasons that the humor in this space-age fantasy works is the fact that Alex is an average kid, and stays that way under extraordinary circumstances. Guest is sweet and believable in his role as Alex, but he really shines as the clone placed on earth to cover up his absence as he battles the evil Xur. The funniest scene in the film involves the clone trying to make out with Alex's girl by copying all the phony lines his super-sensitive ears pick up from other couples in a lover's hide-a-way.

Although the ending is really too cutesy, Castle has come up with some fresh ideas in this summer of rehashed and lukewarm films. He spends time on detail and characterization, from the eccentric residents of the tattered trailer park to Dan O'Herlihy, the slick, lizard-skinned captain of a space ship. And although the special effects are catchy, the real fun occurs not amongst the laser light shows, but when the action is earth bound.

"Phar Lap," starring Ron Leibman, Tom Burlinson, Martin Vaughn, Judy Morris. Directed by Simon Wincer. Rated PG (profanity).

Australian films have been the rage in the last few years, and for good reason, as most are very well made and extremely entertaining. That was, however, before "Phar Lap."

Based on the true story of a record-breaking Australian race horce which died mysteriously in 1932, it would have been better to have let this horse rest in peace. Director Simon Wincer takes this very singular theme and stretches it into an hour and a half of interminable boredom. There is no substance to this film, which is obvious by the simple fact that the viewers are forced to watch Phar Lap race over and over again, in slow motion, no less. In between races, the story is padded out with sappy dialogue between a few stilted characters. And when there is the possibility of some action, such as following up on the suspected foul play in the death of the thoroughbred, Wincer ends the story.

Therefore forget "Phar Lap," as this movie is very similar to the horse, it runs one long lap then lies down and dies.

Real Estate market booming despite higher rates

"Dollar volume sales are still setting records for the Massachusetts Association of Realtors despite the creeping increase of interest rates," notes State President Edmund G. Woods, Jr. of Holyoke, reporting on 21 of 22 Boards of Realtors' Multiple Listing Services at the end of June. "Homebuyers have spent more than $1.3 billion the first six months of this year, $200 million more than invested during the same period in 1983, a 27 percent increase."

President Woods reports the average cost of a home in the Commonwealth is $86,059. At the close of the first quarter, which ended in a 52 percent dollar volume sales increase, the average cost of a home was $96,762; a signal that sales have slowed down as the interest rates edged up beyond 14.5 percent — a level at which natural economists agree potential homebuyers hesitate to borrow.

"Of particular note," remarks Woods, "is the lack of listings. During the first quarter listings were down 20 percent from the previous year's same period. By mid-year, listings were down 16 percent as compared with June 1983. Obviously, with the interest rates and the cost of housing both increasing, sales are expected to slow down," adds Woods.

"Oddly enough, the number of sales have increased with the available inventory rapidly depleting," continues Woods.

"The foremost question in the minds of more than 11,650 Realtor professionals in Massachusetts is, 'Will the federal deficit be lowered this year to reduce interest rates as occurring in September 1982?' This was the beginning of this industry's economic recovery which provided opportunity to homebuyers to fulfill the American dream of home ownership with affordable housing."

A matter of vital importance pondered by Realtors pertinent to this election year, is the fear of any future increase in federal or state taxes, which will adversely affect the industry.

Any reduction of new home construction, curtailed by a tight money market, could possibly revive the large numbers of unemployed in related industries. "Although this State Association is thriving through the sales of existing single family homes, condominiums and cooperative dwellings, we are locked into the theory of supply and demand," explains Milton H. Shaw, MAR's executive vice president for more than 16 years.

"If a Realtor doesn't have a property to sell because the seller's price is too high to be affordable, then the Realtor isn't going to do any business. And, if the interest rates are reduced, the cost of housing is certainly going to rise," argues Shaw, MAR's chief operating officer.

In addition to concerns about the national elections, Massachusetts Realtors envision other normal activities affecting the real estate industry. Among these activities will be the thousands of grade school children moving up the educational ranks requiring school transfers; college students and graduates creating "empty nests" for parents; the usual retirements, job transfers in the fall, and the natural attrition of the elderly moving into senior citizen housing, nursing homes, etc.

Within the spectrum of all this speculation which could stimulate the industry: (1) It is still a buyer-seller marketplace-at least until the Congress convenes, and decides the federal budget; (2) buyer's are not likely to gamble on the probability of declining interest rates for a mortgage break, and (3) The national economy for 1985 is too unpredictable to determine stability of employment or the course of the inflation rate to invest in a mortgage which may become a financial burden.

Meanwhile, 19 of the 21 Boards of Realtors report an increase in dollar volume sales. Two Boards reporting a decline in sales are Eastern Middlesex (9 percent) and Lowell (2 percent). Cape Cod, New Bedford and North Worcester report gains of more than 60 percent each, and all other Boards average gains of 40 percent in dollar volume sales for the first six months in 1984.

"Hot" pets

Prevent heatstroke and other hazards by leaving your pet at home in the hot summer months. If you have the facilities to leave your pet outside while you are away during the day, make sure he is in an area that will stay shady, and have plenty of fresh water available at all times. If you must travel with your pet, make sure the windows are opened enough to provide safety as well as adequate ventilation.

If you would like to have some free flyers to carry with you to place under the windshield wipers of cars containing HOT pets, just send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to: HOT DOG, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, Ma. 02117.

Hiking the high roads of New Hampshire

Trail upkeep weighs heavily on volunteers

By Vincent Winkel
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Mount Madison, N.H.

HOWLING winds buffet the low-lying house, rattling the windows. Massive clouds skim over the roof as they blow eastward. In the distance, two hikers with bright red backpacks appear over the ridge of rocky Mt. Madison. Five-hundred feet above timberline, the hikers are almost thrown off balance by 50 mile-an-hour gusts. They spot the hut, and their figures grow larger as they draw near.

The two find shelter and warmth in the Appalachian Mountain Club's (AMC) Madison Hut, a sturdy house nestled in the valley between two peaks in the Presidential Range of the White Mountains.

"Welcome to Madison Hut," hutmaster Mark Dindorf beams, as the two hikers join a dozen weary trekkers and indulge in hot, home-cooked lasagne. "We're glad to have you all up here!"

Mr. Dindorf is one of eight hutmasters in the White Mountains, each one presiding over an AMC hut. This season he's in charge of Madison, the first hut the AMC built back in 1888.

After supper, Dindorf leads the group outside for a view of the sunset. With brisk winds outside, the temperature drops to below freezing. Some hikers stay inside, but most follow the hutmaster toward a steep ridge to face the sinking orange Sun.

"Try to stay on the rocks," Dindorf shouts above the roaring wind. "There are quite a few sensitive wildflowers here — and one wrong step will crush them." One hiker does not listen, and sits down on a mossy rock coated with small alpine wildfowers.

"Well, we can't get to all of them," the hutmaster sighs.

With its lichen-covered walls and weathered gray shingles, Madison Hut looks like a part of this rocky, wind-swept col. It is one of eight huts operated by the AMC — a private, nonprofit organization dedicated to preserving the nation's wilderness areas. The huts, which provide lodging and meals for hikers for a small fee, are interconnected by the Appalachian Trail and other trails here in New Hampshire.

Since 1876, AMC volunteers have helped to care for some trails in the White Mountains. Now, however, the AMC is concerned that the bulk of trail upkeep is falling on its shoulders because the United States Forest Service (USFS) is shifting its priorities.

The AMC's relations with the Forest Service, which have been close in the past, have become increasingly strained since 1980. Under the Reagan administration, the USFS is using a fifth of its budget in the White Mountain National Forest for timber use and management (more than $1 million of this year's $4.9 million budget), says Ned Therrien of the US Forest Service's office in Laconia, N.H. Only $75,000 has been allocated to trail maintenance, he says.

USFS staff trains AMC volunteers to tend the trails. Now that the budget is being cut, there isn't enough forest-service personnel to train the volunteers, say AMC coordinators.

"You can't orchestrate volunteers without paid staff," says Bonnie Christie, AMC conservation coordinator. "They [the USFS] don't want to put any money into trail maintenance. They are robbing Peter to pay Paul."

So far, the AMC workers are holding their own. But AMC officials are concerned that trails will erode and plant life will die if the mountain paths are not maintained.

The AMC is also alarmed over the USFS policy of expanding the number of logging contracts to cut down timber in some areas. While the AMC acknowledges the land can be used to turn a profit, officials say the USFS is leaning too much in that direction.

"The USFS is concerned with market resources," says Ms. Christie. "We try to protect nonmarket resouces, such as the beauty of the land. You can't put a price on that."

Each year more than 5 million people use the White Mountain National Forest. "You can't take funds from recreation in an area like this," she says.

The Appalachian Mountain Club, organized in 1876, is the oldest and largest mountain club in the nation. The club has built and now maintains 20 shelters and 400 miles of trails in New Hampshire and Maine.

The AMC patterned its huts after those of the Alps in Europe. With the construction of the Madison Springs Hut, the AMC kicked off its program of building refuges for hikers in the highest mountains east of the Mississippi and north of the Carolinas.

But the AMC does more than provide huts. With about 30,000 members nationwide, the club began expanding its role during the environmental movement of the 1960s.

Currently the club is involved in many environmental projects. One is monitoring acid rain, an issue that has received much news media attention during the past two years. Acid rain — precipitation that sweeps into New England from industrial areas that produce large quantities of sulfur-dioxide pollutants — is a problem that is even more urgent in the White Mountains, AMC officials say.

At the top of Mt. Washington sits an acid rain monitor, which last summer began monitoring the acidity in clouds over the mountains. Originally sponsored by the Weyerhaeuser Company, the station is run by the Worcester Polytechnical Institute and continues with funds from the Mellon Foundation, says Ms. Christie of the AMC.

In the Northeast, clouds that skim through the mountains are almost as acidic as the rain that drops out of them, preliminary findings show. Hence, some areas get a double-dose of acid rain, causing twice as much damage to forests and streams.

Some government studies indicate acid rain destroys aquatic ecosystems by polluting fresh-water resources and affects forests by reducing their productivity. The AMC, using findings from the station, has taken a leading role to provide the public with information about acid rain.

Through its 12 chapters, numerous camps, and trails program, the AMC today is responsible for maintaining almost 1,000 miles of trails nationwide, including a 250-mile stretch of the famed Appalachian Trail that runs from Georgia to Maine. The largest portion of trails are in the White Mountains, where AMC maintains more than 100 trails with an aggregate length of 350 miles.

AMC trails are tended by club members who volunteer their labor. Camp Dodge, located a few minutes' drive from AMC headquarters at Pinkham Notch, is where vacationers can come to donate their time for volunteer work. They are provided with warm meals and a place to stay. In exchange, they work on trails — clearing them or building culverts.

"It lets people give something back to the wilderness," says Chris Landry, camp coordinator and a former volunteer. "Some people may not think spending their vacation working on trails is fun, but you'd be surprised at how many people love it."

Although AMC headquarters is located in Boston, most of its volunteer coordination takes place at Pinkham Notch, in the heart of the White Mountains.

Pinkham Notch Camp, on Route 16 north of Conway, serves as a popular trailhead meeting place for hikers preparing for a trip into the mountains. The young men and women working the Notch are well versed in the trails and can help steer a hiker in the right direction.

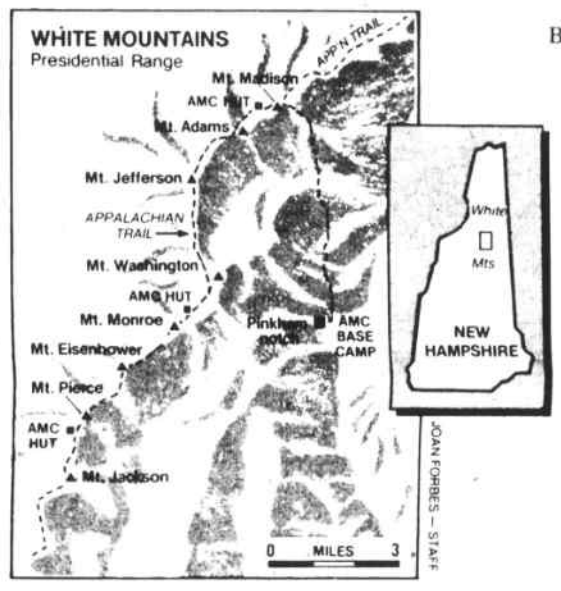

"They can usually tell what type of hiker a person is when he or she walks in the door," Pinkham Notch manager Jon Martinson says of his staff. "And that's important. We don't want someone to try a hike that's too challenging for them."

Another facet of the AMC is its education program. Walter Graff, New York City-born, has been with the AMC for 10 years and is now educational programs director. This summer, the AMC will lead 15 different guided hikes into the White Mountains out of Pinkham Notch, the AMC base camp near Mt. Washington.

ROCK 'N' ROLL THE DICE

Nosul Productions of New Bedford has recently released a music trivia playing board game entitled "Rock 'N' Roll the Dice". The invention has been one-year in the making and contains over 2,500 questions covering the years 1955 to 1984 on popular music subjects featuring song titles, artists, album titles, video hits, and other anecdotes.

Besides having a very attractive gold-box cover design, it contains a unique "gold-record" playing board with resembling tracks of an album. By collecting your own color-coded rock band of five musicians and "Answering Out of Turn", winning the game is established.

Immediate distribution is ready for department and record stores through the greater New England area. Orders have already been placed at Child World and Midland Records. GAMES Magazine will feature an ad in their Sept. - Nov. issues. For more information, call 995-7492.

Expo, music games, cowboy movies - COMING ATTRACTIONS has something to please all. But we miss a few every so often and need your help. If you know of an event of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We are willing to try anything once - twice if we like it.

Cook-outs are summer fun

There's nothing more enjoyable on a balmy summer day than a cook-out! Cuts of meat sizzling on the grill, their aromas blending with the smoke, are a welcome change from indoor dining. In addition to enjoying a delicious meal, cooking-out allows you to experiment with different combinations of food.

Native vegetables are perfect for outdoor grilling, says the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture. Now that summer is here, native fresh vegetables are plentiful and they add color and texture and make a delicious accompaniment to any dish.

Vegetables can be grilled over or even in the coals. Grill vegetables 4 to 6 inches above the fire, turning frequently for even cooking. Oil vegetables to keep skins tender and pierce fleshy-type vegetables to prevent skins from bursting when cooking. For roasting directly on the coals, choose vegetables with a thick outer skin, such as winter squash.

What would a meal outdoors be without a crispy green salad?

The Department of Food and Agriculture reports locally grown lettuce greens are readily available at farmers markets, roadside stands and supermarkets. When shopping for greens, look for these varieties grown in Massachusetts: crisphead lettuce, such as the Iceberg variety; Butterhead, such as Boston or Bibb; Red or Green Leaf Lettuce; and the Romaine variety. Don't forget to add scallions, radishes, and alfalfa sprouts to your salad!

Why not include some of these ideas at your next cook-out. Grilled lamb or chicken parts; Fresh and grilled native vegetables; Potato Salad; Layerd lettuce salad with radishes and scallions; Fresh rolls and butter; Fresh fruit salad with lots of native blueberries.
